VaLUENTiS: Unique in its offering

As a company, VaLUENTiS and its Business School has been delivering consulting and coaching for over 15 years to a variety of organisations across many sectors.

We've seen such growth in the use of coaching to the extent that it now deserves its own brochure.

We've been lucky to have worked with some of the highest profile companies in the world and our pioneering work in engagement is as relevant today as it's always been.

More recent focus has been on manager/team engagement and all that it entails. As a conduit for performance or issue resolution whether organisational or personal, coaching in its various guises has become a 'go-to' process.

We now have a burgeoning toolkit and a portfolio of methodologies to assist in a variety of assignments whether specific one-off requests or more programmed regular interventions backed up with psychometric profiling.

From a client perspective, you can expect the highest professional service, from 'the brief' through to any ensuing custom-designed assistance.

We look to make a difference, sometimes life-changing, other times just a good solid sounding-board for helping with issues whether it is performance, skills, team, customer, organisational, entrepreneurial, manager or executive related.

We are dedicated to using an evidence/analytic based approach that provides a fully rounded perspective and insight.

We've more recently added two further approaches to assist in the coaching environment, where appropriate: (i) deep case-study based assisted learning on a one-to-one basis, and (ii) game-based interaction that is not PC based.

We believe these are fairly unique in the market place and enrich the coaching experience delivered by our consultants.

“Innovation is seeing what everybody has seen but thinking what nobody has thought.”

Ludorati coaching overview

There are varied interpretations and perspectives on coaching in terms of what it is and how it is used. Here we provide an overview of the main forms of coaching need and delivery.

1 Executive coaching: an effective way to strengthen the performance of the senior management/leadership team, in various guises whether interpersonal, behavioural, transitional or transformational, problem-solving and/or decision-making. Members of top teams can often feel isolated or suffer from cultural 'inhibitors' or bias.

Executive/leadership can focus on individuals and/or the team and typically kicks off with clear brief of expectation and outcome with a parallel SWOT process to ensure a reality check derived from various sources identified and alignment with key stakeholders.

During any engagement, the coach(es) will utilise various approaches and methods from the VaLUENTiS toolkit to help construct and work through development plans, whether addressing specific business and/or interpersonal challenges.

Ludorati coaching overview

Team coaching includes a variety of methodologies and techniques from VaLUENTiS 4A toolkit targeted to generate positive interactions whilst exploring challenges of thinking or behaviour even though these may not always be comfortable.

Psychometrics tend to be used here as supporting infrastructure. Interventions can take the form of structured, semi-structured or more open facilitative approaches – most often a combination.

This coaching programme expansion can have many different facets and to be effective requires appropriate design, often modular in approach, and planning with lots of support mechanisms – what is often referred to as an integrated framework which also offers internal coaching accreditation.
